TRUMAN TERMS DRAFT VITAL TO PEACE HOPE

Would Be Training To Prevent War, Not Win One, Princeton Told.

By The Associated Press

PRINCETON, N. J., June 17—President Truman said today this country's pledge to help free nations resist the "encroachment of totalitarian pressures" makes universal training a "military necessity."

"We must remember above all," the Chief Executive asserted, "that these men would not be training in order to win a war, but in order to prevent one."

The President came here by special train from Washington to receive his tenth honorary doctor of laws degree at a Princeton university bicentenial convocation in which similar honors were bestowed on 36 other outstanding leaders.

"Peace Needs Strength"

"Peace-loving nations," Mr. Truman said in his prepared address, "can make only slow progress toward the attainment of a stable world—in which all peoples are free to work out their own destinies in their own way—unless their moral leadership is supported by strength.

"Weakness on our part would stir fear among small or weakened nations that we were giving up our world leadership. It would seem to them that we lacked the will to fulfill our pledge to aid free and independent nations to maintain their freedoms, or our commitments to aid in restoring war-torn economies.

"In such an atmosphere of uncertainty, these nations might not be able to resist the encroachment of totalitarian pressures.

"We must not let friendly nations go by default."

The President said universal training is "vital to the national welfare."

"Most Democratic Way"

He declared:

"Universal training represents the most democratic, the most economical, and the most effective method of maintaining the military strength we need.

"It is the only way that such strength can be achieved without imposing a ruinous burden on our economy through the maintenance of a large standing armed force."

A report by a presidential commission recommending a universal training law has been forwarded to congress, but no action is expected at this session.

The President also took occasion to cite what he long has contended is the need for higher salaries in the government service to attract "the kind of executives required to manage its vital activities."

And he suggested a program for "the systematic training" of civilian employes once they have entered the public service, both "on the job and on the campus."

Schools Have Job

He added that the nation's schools must "train future leaders in all fields to understand and concern themselves with the expanded role of government, and—equally important—to see the need for effective administration of the government's business in the public interest."

President Truman was one of 36 persons to receive honorary degrees.

The purple hood of the laws degree was slipped over the head and shoulders of the President after the degree had been conferred upon Chief Justice of the United States Frederick M. Vinson, Governor Alfred E. Driscoll of New Jersey, and Field Marshal Viscount Alexander of Tunis, governor general of Canada.

General Dwight D. Eisenhower, chief of staff of the U. S. army, and Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, chief of naval operations, also received the honorary degree of doctor of laws.

President Truman was the thirteenth president to receive an honorary laws degree from Princeton. In the procession marched former President Hoover, representing Stanford university, who received an honorary degree from Prince in 1917.

Other recipients of degrees included:

Doctor of laws—

Warren R. Austin, U. S. representative to the United Nations.

Bernard M. Baruch, former U. S. representative to the United Nations atomic energy commission.

Vannevar Bush, president of the Carnegie Institution of Washington.

Charles F. Kettering, research and engineer of General Motors Corporation.

Draft Wallace Move Started

Hints New Party in Speech Proposing Truman-Stalin Berlin Talks.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 17 — A "draft Henry Wallace for president" movement began to take shape today as the former vice president awaited any official response to his call for a Truman-Stalin meeting in Berlin to settle Soviet-American differences.

Wallace, the most vocal critic of President Truman's foreign policy in this country, said he knew nothing of the "draft" move, which originated in California.

But in his address here last night before a cheering outdoor crowd estimated at from 8,000 to 10,500, the ousted cabinet officer said "there will be a new party" if the two major parties "insist on pursuing the present suicidal course toward war and depression."

He called on Mr. Truman to invite Premier Stalin to meet with him in Berlin to discuss economic and trade relations between the two countries as a "first step" to world peace.

Robert W. Kenny, former California attorney general, said in Los Angeles that the draft-Wallace campaign would get under way at a meeting in Fresno, Calif., July 19. Wallace will not appear, but may send a message to the gathering, Kenny said.

The primary purpose, he added, will be to select a committee to name a slate of 54 candidates for a pro-Wallace California delegation to the next Democratic national convention.

Kenny, Southern California chairman of the Progressive Citizens of America, which sponsored many of Wallace's recent speeches across the country, said:

"This may be the first in a series of grass-roots get-togethers throughout the country."

Wallace spoke last night at the Watergate, a government-owned amphitheater near the Lincoln memorial. The audience occupied 8,500 reserved seats which sold for from 60 cents to $3.60 and spread out on nearby Memorial bridge and a bordering roadway.

Officials of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, which sponsored the rally, said $8,000 was collected from the audience in donations ranging from $1 to $500.

RECOUNT VOTE FAILS TO VOID TRUMAN ACTION

Chamber Tries Twice To Override; Result Means Bill Completely Dead.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 17—The house today upheld President Truman's veto of the $4,000,000,000 tax reduction bill, thus killing it finally and completely.

The vote was 268 to pass the bill over the veto and 137 against. Thus it was two votes short of the two-thirds majority necessary to pass a law over the President's disapproval.

Recount Also Fails

When that count turned up on the roll call, Republican Leader Halleck of Indiana demanded and obtained a recount, but no votes were changed.

Voting to override the veto were 233 Republicans and 35, Democrats.

Supporting the President were 134 Democrats, two Republicans—Carl Andersen of Minnesota and Hull of Wisconsin—and the American Labor member, Marcantonio of New York.

Applause broke out on the Democratic side as the vote was announced.

Senate Not To Vote

The house action means the senate will not even vote on the issue of overriding the veto.

It means, too, that Republicans have an issue they already have made clear will figure prominently in the 1948 presidential campaign.

Before the vote, Speaker Martin had declared that if the senate or house upheld the veto it would mean no new attempt this year to reduce taxes.

Rep. Smith Paired To Override in House Vote

Rep. Smith of Marion, Ohio congressman from the Eighth district, was paired to override the presidential veto of the tax cutting bill, according to The Associated Press.

Among Ohioans voting to override were Republicans Brown of the Seventh district and McGregor of the Seventeenth.

NEW TAX CUT BILL PROPOSED BY OHIOAN

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 17—Rep. Thomas A. Jenkins (R-Ohio) suggested today that congress pass a new tax reduction bill before quitting for the summer.

Calling the President's veto of the tax cut approved by congress a "political gesture," Jenkins, a high ranking member of the tax-writing ways and means committee, told a reporter he would recommend a second bill if congress sustained the veto.

"I believe the house has registered its determination to have a tax reduction this year but I don't know about the senate," Jenkins said.

He added that other Republicans in the house wanted a tax bill badly enough to pass a new one and send it to the White House before adjourning.

Jenkins said that President Truman's attitude toward tax reduction was disclosed in testimony before the ways and means committee by treasury officials several months ago.

"When the President's secretary of the treasury came before the committee in January he opposed the tax reduction bill," Jenkins said. "He knows now that this was not the time but that we should wait until next year.

"Of course, he was speaking for the President. I don't know what the President will do if a second bill is passed by congress. I don't know whether he will veto it or not. I don't know whether congress will override the veto. I don't know whether the senate will pass the bill. I don't know whether the senate will override the veto. I don't know whether the house will override the veto. I don't know whether the senate will override the veto. I don't know whether the house will override the veto. I don't know whether the senate will override the veto. I don't know whether the house will override the veto

California Couple Adopt Entire French Village

By HAL BOYLE
Associated Press Writer

SANTA BARBARA, Calif., June 17—Girard and Kathleen Hale set a new pattern in international friendship by adopting a small war-wrecked French village.

It has worked so well that some 25 other American individuals and civic organizations have followed their example—and thus put goodwill between the two countries on a personal rather than a governmental basis.

Hal Boyle

It began when the Hales, a wealthy couple who lived many years in France, became convinced that scattered charities—"20 packets of food here, $100 there"—did not give the French a feeling that the American people were deeply interested in their welfare. In this mood of dissatisfaction, Kathleen Hale, an energetic middle-aged little woman with a face like the map of Ireland, heard from a friend the story of Maille. No battles were fought in this small village near Tours in the "chateau country," but the villagers sheltered a shot-down British aviator. In August 1944, the Germans as a reprisal shot to death 124 of its 480 inhabitants—including a 70-year-old man, a six-month-old baby—killed all the livestock, burned two-thirds of its buildings.

Can't Forget Story

Warm-hearted Mrs. Hale couldn't forget the story. She told it that night to her husband, an artist who had studied in Paris.

"I suppose you want us to adopt the village," he said.

Mrs. Hale decided right then she did.

"It was one of those things you don't know why you do," she told me on the specious verandah of the Hales' mountain top home here.

That was in April of last year. Within two months she had obtained from the villagers a list of the things they needed most and had them on the pier at Le Havre. There were 7,099 items.

Set Right On Limits

"We let them know at the start that we couldn't afford to rebuild the town or supply them with food," said Mrs. Hale. But she and her husband did refurnish the village church and school and sent household linen, furniture and kitchen equipment to every family that needed them.

"We got exact sizes in clothing for the women and children," she smiled, "but with French men—well they aren't so particular. They just take small, medium or large."

The first things the pious villagers asked for were funeral curtains and wedding carpets for the church. But the Hales got more fun out of sending things that weren't asked—fishing poles for the children, gay dish towels, brightly colored garbage cans—little gifts to nourish the French love for small luxuries.

"Everything is being used, but not always for the purpose it was sent," said Mrs. Hale. "We've heard some of the dish towels are being hung up for wall decorations and the smaller garbage containers are being used as center pieces for the dining table to hold flowers. A major victory for the Hales came at Christmas time. Only necessities were being permitted to be sent by the anti-short French government. Mrs. Hale wrote to inquire if the happiness of children was necessity in France.

Acknowledges Belief

A hard-press French official gallantly acknowledged it was.

"We then sent decorations for a giant Christmas tree," said Mrs. Hale, 'and three gifts for every child in Maille—one useful, one semi-useful and one toy."

The village is now returning to normal. The Hales currently are sending agricultural implements—the villagers named the first tractor "Girard" after her husband—and layettes. Babies are being born again and, as Mrs. Hale remarked, "the field crops are doing well, too."

She said a village could be adopted for $2,000 to $10,000, depending on its size. I asked her what reward she had had.

"Only a warm feeling around the heart," she said. "We have never seen the village. They ask us often to come, but I think it perhaps would be better never to go.

"This isn't really a brief thing. It is a pleasant life sentence. They are getting back on their feet, and now they want to send us things—a case of honey, for example. I think this exchanging of gifts will keep us—but they may get more frivolous as time goes on.

"No one thing we have sent has meant as much to them as the fact that anything at all was sent—the people in America remember them. It is for that they are most grateful."

A GOWN of ivory slipper satin was worn by Miss Doris Weber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence W. Weber of 195 Wildwood court when she walked down the aisle of the First Evangelical and Reformed church to become the bride of James Edward Elliott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Elliott of Columbus, Sunday afternoon. Preceding her to the altar were her attendants, Mrs. Carl Schaefer of Sandusky, sister of the bridegroom, who was the matron of honor, Miss Joan Drumpelmann of Rocky River, her roommate and sorority sister at Miami university and the flower girl, Suzanne Elliott of Columbus, also a sister of the bridegroom.

Mr. Weber escorted his daughter to the altar and gave her in marriage. Her gown, fashioned with a casque accented with wide pinallops and a deep sweetheart neckline, and long fitted sleeves coming in points at the hands, and the skirt ended in a tiny train. For the traditional something borrowed she wore the bridal veil belonging to the matron of honor, which fell from a heart-shaped halo, and her wedding bouquet held white orchids and lilies of the valley. Her jewelry was a strand of pearls, the bridegroom's gift.

The attendants wore identical gowns of blue taffeta with net yokes in off-the-shoulder effect. The basques were sleeveless and were scalloped to match the bride's gown. Their tiny crownless hats were of horsehair braid and matched the color of their gowns as did their long silk mitts. Mrs. Schaefer carried roses in an American Beauty shade and Miss Drumpelmann's flowers were roses in a pink shade. The flower girl's frock of white taffeta had a wide neckline and a blue satin ribbon sash with streamers reaching to the bottom of her dress. She wore pink roses in her braids on top of her head.

To light the candles, Miss Sharon Donahue of Miamisburg, cousin of the bride, wore a gown in a light blue shade and a headdress of pink roses.

Carl Schaefer of Sandusky, brother-in-law of the bridegroom served as his best man and ushers were his brother, Tom Elliott of Columbus, and George Overly of Marysville.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Weber chose a costume in a dusty rose shade with jewel button trim and a hat of black horsehair and lace and black accessories. The bridegroom's mother wore a print crepe costume in white and orchid and white accessories. Both wore orchid corsages.

Closed chuch was observed for the ceremony read at 3:30 o'clock by Rev. Edward J. Haldeman of Edison, retired minister. The altar was banked with palms and greenery to form a background for two tall baskets of white gladioli and two seven-branch candelabra. The choir loft was hung with huckleberry foliage and smilax caught with large white ribbon bows and pews in the center aisle were marked with white satin ribbon bows.

Mrs. Fred Sinning played a program of organ music and Miss Barbara Hedges sang. The organ numbers included "Estrella," Ponce, "Always," Berlin, "Indian Love Call," Friml, "All for You," Brown, "'Til the End of Time," Mossman, "I Love You Truly," Bond, and during the ceremony "O Perfect Love," Barnby, was played. Miss Hedges sang "Because," D'Hardelot and "On Promise Me," DeKoven.

At the close of the ceremony Rev. Haldeman presented the bride and bridegroom at the altar and they received the guests informally in the church parlor where the decorations were bowls of pink and white peonies.

Mr. and Mrs. Weber entertained with a reception for the out-of-town guests at their home. White flowers and greenery banked the window in the diningroom to form a setting for the table laid with a white hand embroidered linen cloth. The three-tiered wedding cake was surrounded with huckleberry foliage and lilies of the valley.

The couple will motor through the Adirondacks on their honeymoon. For traveling the bride chose a white silk faille costume. The jacket had a long waist accented with a flaring peplum in the back, and her accessories were plaid. Upon their return they will live in Linden Place, Columbus.

The bride was graduated from Miami university in 1949 and for the last two years has been on the faculty at Harding High school. She is a member of Chi Omega sorority. Mr. Elliott returned a year ago from European theater. Entering service while a student at Ohio State university he was a captain in the 248th Division Combat engineers of the Third Army. He is now completing his study at Ohio State university.

Everybody Making Hay

THE odd thing about the tax-bill veto is the way everybody sees merit in Mr. Truman's explanation, yet doubts that he is using the right explanation.

He says this isn't the time to reduce taxes; that this is the time to make hay—while national income is high and taxes are easy to collect. He says the national debt must be reduced in order to maintain confidence.

But of course there's a lot more involved than the ease of tax collection and confidence in the government's financial soundness. That's where the argument lies—in the other things.

Republicans argue that it's more important to prove that taxes can be reduced than it is to collect a few billion dollars of extra income. They argue that popular confidence will be affected more by keeping taxes at wartime levels in peacetime than by reducing them. They argue that Mr. Truman's veto is only a scheme to take credit next year for cutting income taxes himself and really has nothing to do with the reason he is giving. As far as that's concerned, the Republican policy on taxation seems to have less to do with the reasons they are talking about than it has to do with the campaign promises they made last year.

Taxes and politics are inseparable. Both parties are playing politics. The question is who's playing the better brand. For once, the public seems to have a chance to win, no matter who loses. If the tax bill is passed over Mr. Truman's veto, income taxes will be a shade lower. If it isn't passed over Mr. Truman's veto, Mr. Truman probably will come out flat-footed next year against himself this year—and income taxes will be a shade lower. In the meantime, if the Democrats want to reduce the national debt, they might help the Republicans find a few more places to cut the cost of operating the government.

No Room for Opposition

SENATOR VANDENBERG, sticking to his role of statesman, now advises Republican and Democratic party leaders to get their heads as close together on world aid as they did on world war. This may be the most significant political portion of his career. It may bring forth one of the most important decisions in the Republican party's history.

Vandenberg is blocking a move inside the party to revive foreign policy as a political issue. Aid to war-weary governments and people, he says, is not a political matter. There is no room for political opposition in this matter, he believes.

If foreign aid were to become an issue between the parties, Republicans would veer toward isolation, the only logical position for them to take when the administration is following a policy of intervention. It would be the same kind of withdrawal that followed World War I.

The dangerous thing is that a large body of public opinion seems to be ready for such a withdrawal and ready to run helter-skelter after anyone promising to provide an escape from the realities of this country's galling responsibilities as the world's foremost power.

Senator Vandenberg is afraid of what would happen if Americans became preoccupied with their own affairs, at the expense of exerting their influence in a world that otherwise would be at the mercy of the only other nation with force to exert—the Soviet Union.

The last time the United States put its head in the sand it woke up to the roar of Japanese bombs at Pearl Harbor. Vandenberg fears a recurrence of that kind of blindness. He fears the consequences of exploiting the people's disillusionment about the outcome of the war. He fears the result of a Republican movement that might commit the party to outright isolation in the next presidential campaign.

His position concerns more than foreign aid. It affects the two-party system, being an attempt to prolong wartime suspension of partnership in foreign policy. Closing ranks succeeded in wartime because Franklin D. Roosevelt had the foresight to try it and men like Vandenberg had the courage to make it work. Now it's Vandenberg using the foresight and hoping to find others with the courage.

It won't be easy to stall Republicans itching to revive a foreign policy issue. It wouldn't be easy to stall the Democrats, if the party positions were switched. But unless it can be done, no foreign government will know what to expect from Washington. Either the two parties will see eye to eye, or they'll have nothing to look at.

They must take a joint view not only of foreign aid, but of this nation's resources: there must be a stop to such controversial statements as the one Republicans are making that foreign aid is only a means of settling a domestic economy program. Vandenberg has given himself what looks like the hardest assignment of his public career.

Alabama is known as the cotton state.

News Behind the News

By PAUL MALLON

New Deal Theory Seen in Pre-Veto Maneuvers

WASHINGTON, June 17—The preparations made by Treasury Secretary Snyder for veto of the tax reduction bill revealed a memorable day of New Deal politics, even if there were not so cast from a political standpoint if any tax chart the inside strategy. Officials are acting on the conclusion, as the Republicans have been thinking, that a veto would be unpopular. One senate Republican leader jokingly said the other day "When Mr. Truman vetoes our bill, all we have to do is go garner all the taxpayers of the country on our side, and let the Democrats have the other votes."

The Snyder statement, however, like the earlier Truman pronouncement on prices, reeked with alarm the prospect of any tax reducing now. Snyder flatly said the cut should wait until all the figures are in for this calendar year (not the fiscal year, which is up June 30) and hinted at what the administration has afoot, namely — a tax reduction next year when Mr. Truman will be running for reelection.

Outline of Strategy

Amid wailing with fiscal alarm and pointing with budgetary pride then, the treasury was merely sent on another Roosevelt-type of strategem in its advance work for a veto. It seemed deliberately offering this gaze of an apparently unpopular issue with an idea of popularizing it when voting time comes. It would take hold of the Republican's own issue, block it, then use it when needed.

Hence the Democrats are saying among themselves: "If you think we are dumb, just wait and see."

Chiefly Political

This political side of the financial situation seems to be just about the main point. Few financial men outside the administration can follow the treasury idea from a purely fiscal standpoint, although of course, it has the support of a financial realist like Senator Byrd of Virginia and a lefthand, mild disinclination of a fiscal leader like Senator George to thwart it, in the event of a Truman veto.

The government will spend more than $39,000,000,000 next year anyway, so the argument is about a mere $4,000,000,000 and whether it is less inflationary for the government to spend it than for the taxpayers to use this portion of their own money to pay the high prices. Arguing about this could last far into the night, indeed probably will lead far into the presidential campaign. Certainly from any standpoint of human finance, it seems to me the the taxpayers would use the $4,000,000,000 better than the government. Spending by taxpayers is diffuse. They spend for items of living in stores. Spending by government considerably trends toward durable goods as a high military budget, although it also pays salaries, spends for food and the items of daily living for many people.

Opposing View

Yet most objective economists will take the position that the good of the country is best served by private spending rather than spending for public works or governmental activities.

As for the purely economic aspect of the Snyder position, it would seem to be much better from the human standpoint certainly for the taxpayers to have the $4,000,000,000 this year than next, because the prices are high now. Next year, with advances in production, the price level is supposed to become lower. The people, then, could use the money better now.

Furthermore the Republicans believe almost unanimously that the veto will work their way to make the administration unpopular for the rest of this year at least, especially if Mr. Truman accompanies it with a veto of the union reform bill. Apparently they are not playing yet for next year.

Pity Poor Man With Only Five Senses

There is no other explanation for the reaction of a Washington lady who sought a warrant for her husband's arrest after "he hit me with his fist, threw me into the bathtub, struck me on the head with a brick, shot at me as I ran into the street, and then threw the brick after me when he missed."

"Even though he is my husband," she concluded, "I don't think he loves me any more."

That's the trouble with modern women: They give up too easily.

Imagine a man's wife going out in search of a copper merely because he gives her a few love pats with a nice, clean brick. Super-sensitive, I calls it.

Hasn't she ever heard the old proverb about true love never running smooth?

What if he did shoot at her . . . He didn't hit her, did he?

She just knows, somehow, that it's all over . . . . There's no other explanation. Women are just psychic.

Farley's Break with the Boss

By RAYMOND MOLEY

THE most remarkable revelation of James A. Farley's current "Collier's" article is that his break with Roosevelt was first social and then political. He was willing to carry out the political program of his boss, including the court-packing plan; to lead the party after 1935, as it veered more and more toward the city bosses and the unions; even to announce his vote for Roosevelt in 1940 and 1944. But in a way known to those who knew Farley and Roosevelt well, but incomprehensible to the masses who supported the late President, a certain social condescension offended Farley deeply.

Never did the Postmaster General sleep in the White House which, had he but known it, was a lucky break for a light sleeper. The beds were pretty bad—even in Lincoln's half-acre. When he went on the yacht, the cruise was political. Well, so it was, even when Farley wasn't along. And he was never included in intimate White House affairs—a not irreparable loss.

Social Equals Only

"Franklin," Farley quotes Mrs. Roosevelt, "finds it hard to relax with people who aren't his social equals." This was the most unkindest cut of all.

Quite a bit later, in 1938, 1939 and 1940, as Farley will probably relate, the differences shifted from social to political matters. Farley realized that Garner wanted to retire after two terms. He also had no intimation that Roosevelt would run again. Farley entertained a quite rational feeling that the party he had served might call him to higher honors. The vice presidency, maybe, or even the Big Change. He felt that a Hull-Farley ticket would be logical. Farley believes that Roosevelt at first encouraged his ambitions.

Roosevelt's later failure to further Farley's ambitions has been variously explained. One story is that he felt that a Catholic could not win. Another is that Roosevelt felt that Farley should have taken the nomination for governor of New York in 1938, when Herbert Lehman wanted to retire. In any event, there was a lot of characteristic Roosevelt evasion and double talk, and Farley's resentment reached the breaking point. The relationship flickered and faded out in 1940.

First Book Guarded

Farley's book, "Behind the Ballots," published 10 years ago while he was still in office, was well guarded and obviously not a real inside story. The series now beginning is a frank picture of Roosevelt, Farley and of politics generally. It will shock some people and anger others.

The ruthless manner in which the attack on the supreme court was conducted is illustrated by the instructions given to Farley by Roosevelt. The President said, as the great fight opened in 1937:

"First off, we must hold up judicial appointments in states where the delegation is not going along. We must make appointments promptly where the delegation is with us. Where there is a division we must give posts to those supporting us. Second, this must apply to other appointments as well as judicial appointments."

Thus, apparently, is what Roosevelt once called "a new moral climate."

So Red the Tape

Automobile dealers who specialize in export trade must have rough sledding these days, what with the complicated Commerce Department regulations on such exports.

The department bulletin on auto export, after explaining that passenger cars have been placed under general license for export to Group K countries, continues with this important qualification:

"However, validated licenses still are required for the exportation of passenger cars to Group E countries. Holders of valid limited production licenses for the exportation of passenger cars to Group E countries may continue to export against such licenses until the full amount licensed for export to these countries has been shipped or until the validity period of the license expires, whichever is sooner. Exporters desiring to ship additional cars to Group E countries should submit applications for individual licenses on Form IT-419 in accordance with the customary procedure for such licenses, since limited production licenses authorizing shipment of passenger cars to Group E countries will not be issued subsequent to this announcement.

"Comprehensive Export Schedule No. 22, pages 49 and 50, Section II, Part 4, as amended by Current Export Control Bulletin No. 392. Subjects I through V, is amended accordingly."

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn.—Chattanooga claims it has the biggest law enforcement leadership in the country.

When police commissioner Roy Hyatt and police chief Ed Ricketts start throwing their weight around against law violators, the criminals come up against 561 pounds.

Ricketts is almost six feet, five inches tall and weighs 289 pounds. Hyatt is exactly six feet, five and weight 272. Ricketts wears a size 13 shoe. Hyatt an 11½. Both prefer a half size larger.

Hyatt, former cowpuncher, smokes 15 to 20 cigars a day. Ricketts, an ex-coal miner, yields to no one when eating reputations are at stake.

He once knocked off a roast beef plate, two biz T-bone steaks with all the trimmings and a pan of rice pudding topped with eight to 10 dips of ice cream.

No Time for Generalities

By WALTER LIPPMANN

BOTH Senator Vandenberg and Mr. Hoover have asked the same question: What can the United States afford to export in order to assure the rehabilitation of the European and the world economy? This crucial question can be stated in general terms but it cannot be answered in general terms.

It will have to be answered by making an estimate of the actual commodities which the outer world must obtain on a time schedule in the American market, and then of matching this estimate against what we can supply out of surplus, plus what we could supply by increasing the production of certain goods and by reducing our own consumption of certain goods.

The great virtue of Secretary Marshall's approach to the problem is precisely that it will bring about a budgeting of the world's needs and our own actual and potential supplies. Thus the question will be answerable when the leading foreign countries have produced a consolidated estimate and time schedule of their needs, and when each important item in the estimate has been compared with our actual and our potential production and consumption.

Answer Difficult

To attempt to answer the question in advance, in the abstract, is theoretically impossible. For neither the needs of the outer world nor our own capacity to supply them are, as engineers would say, constants. They are variables, which allow wide margin for adjustments, ingenuity, extra effort and sacrifice.

For example: The inquiry might show that an increase of European coal production in the next three years would greatly decrease European needs for American exports. It might show that to increase coal production there are needed machinery from the United States, extra rations for miners, and additional consumer goods.

It would be worth a very special effort by the United States to manufacture that machinery, to allocate the extra food and the extra goods. This would be a strategic, as distinguished from an aimless, contribution to the rehabilitation of Europe which would more than pay for itself because the effect would be to make Europe less dependent on America. It would tend to cure the very thing which Mr. Hoover, for example, fears—that we shall deplete our own resources by overexporting.

If, on the other hand, we debate the problem in generalities, we shall arrive at a series of hopeless contradictions. We shall argue in one breath that we cannot afford to assist in effective rehabilitation. In the next breath, we shall denounce the spread of Communism, proclaim our determination to halt the expansion of Russia,—all of which if it means anything at all, means that in the last analysis we would fight rather than surrender Europe and Asia to Soviet domination.

No Time for Generalities

But if we cannot afford to rehabilitate Europe, which might cost us six or seven billions a year, now on earth can we talk as if we might resist Russia by war, when that might cost us perhaps six billions a month? If we cannot afford to provide the working capital for the rehabilitation of our allies, what sense does it make to talk as if we could afford to go to war to defend them and ourselves?

We should not debate this great, urgent, and extremely practical problem in generalities. The vice of generalities including some of Mr. Hoover's theorizing and his obiter dicta is that they produce heat rather than light, prejudice rather than judgment, and obscure the formulation of definite policies and a concrete program.

Box Score on Accomplishments Of Congress So Far This Term

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON, June 17—This congress has been working five and a half months. It has a month and a half to go. What has it done?

James Marlow

Starting Jan. 3, it is supposed to — under the new organization law — finish by July 31.

If congress can't finish by that time, it can continue by doing one of several things, such as passing a resolution to continue.

If it finishes by July 31, that doesn't mean congress did all the work it had to do but only all the work it decided to do.

These are the major things it has done:

1. Passed a tax-cut bill. President Truman vetoed it yesterday. There's small chance congress can re-pass it into law over the veto.

2. Passed a bill restricting labor unions. Mr. Truman may veto it. If so, congress is expected to re-pass it into law over the veto.

3. The senate okayed peace treaties with Italy, Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria. Mr. Truman signed them. The house doesn't act on treaties.

4. Voted $400,000,000 aid for Greece and Turkey, as part of the Truman doctrine to stop Communism. Mr. Truman signed it.

5. Voted $350,000,000 in American relief for liberated countries. Mr. Truman, who asked for this, signed it, too.

6. Approved a constitutional amendment limiting the presidency to two terms. Now it's up to 36 of the 48 states to do likewise.

7. Voted to continue rent controls until March 1 but in a "modified" way.

8. Voted to ban portal-to-portal pay in most cases. This wiped out practically all of the $6,000,000,000 in pending portal suits.

Many Jobs Unfinished

Although it has done those eight major things, it still has some huge unfinished jobs. For example:

The house but not the senate has approved almost all the appropriations bills—money to run government departments another year. Congress is away behind schedule on this.

Deciding on the appropriations bills and on the eight finished major items has taken a lot of time and work.

But still in the works are these:

Unification of the armed services (maybe will do, maybe not); universal military training, asked by Mr. Truman (probably not); housing bills (not much prospect); federal aid to education (probably not); national science foundation to help research and train young scientists (senate passed, maybe the house will:) national health bill to give better medical care (stumbling along and maybe no action).

There are many other measures hanging fire in congress and pushed aside.

River Floods Low Areas of Bucyrus

Special to The Star

BUCYRUS, June 17—Sandusky river was back within its banks today after a weekend rampage which carried the river to a crest late Saturday afternoon.

During flood stage the river washed away a portion of the foot bridge installed only the previous day at Gay street entrance to Aumiller park and caused a 12-hour delay in ice production at the Bucyrus Ice Co. when a 4,000 gallon fuel oil tank, partially filled was floated from position.

The water again covered Lane street and Munz ball fields making them unusable for several days. Water backing up in the low area along the river flooded many basements, and for a short time covered Lane street, which was closed to traffic for the second time within the last week.

Executive Sees No Depression

Notes Pickup and Says Boom Would Be Here If Not for "Glooming."

By The Associated Press

RICHMOND, Va., June 17—Richard Samuel Reynolds, head of the giant Reynolds Metals Company, said today his firm had noted a pickup in business since the recent slump and added "we would be in the midst of a boom now if it weren't for all the gloomy prophesying."

"Recently I thought we were in for a recession," Reynolds said, "but now we may be able to escape it. I can't see why we should have any appreciable setback in business with people earning more today than ever before."

He added, however, that as production overtook demand—as has already taken place in a number of fields—the sellers' market will end and the buyers' market will take its place.

The Reynolds company recently announced the closing of its big aluminum plant at Longview, Wash., abandonment of plans to take over a $28,000,000 aluminum war plant at Newark, O., and closing of a Kentucky plant. But the Washington and Kentucky plants will be reopened later with new and less expensive processes being used, he said. The Newark plant never was operated by the Reynolds company.

Some of the reduction in operations, which burgeoned during the war to 38 plants in 20 states, was due to the need for repairs, he said, but another factor was that some of the hastily-built plants were "expensive plants"—the cost of extracting the aluminum from the bauxite was nearly double the amount for which it can now be done with improved methods.

"I'm an optimist," said the 65-year-old founder and president of the company, "but at the same time we plan for the worst I don't believe will come. These closures are only temporary."

Reynolds sees home building, transportation and the steel industry as the biggest potential consumers of the war-rocketed production of aluminum. The nation, he said, could utilize three billion pounds annually—in aluminum housing, railroad rolling stock, automobiles and buses but principally in a new field, that of giving steel a coating of aluminum to make it rust and corrosion resistant.

STRICKEN AT GALION

Top Bills O.K.'d by Legislature Along with Those Which Failed

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., June 17—Here is the major legislation passed by the general assembly and that which failed to receive favor during the Jan. 6-June 16 session:

Enacted—A $300,000,000 bond issue to finance a veterans' bonuses to a $400 maximum, subject to approval of voters in the November election.

A state budget of $650,000,000 annually for the public good, even with a provision that 75 per cent of the $27,000,000 a year relief financing be used to increase teachers' salaries and pare additional instructors.

A law to regulate strip mining, requiring operators to spend up to $50 an acre to reforest mined lands.

Requiring large amounts of private property condemned for "blighted areas" and a housing program, limiting planning and requiring annual financial statement to the state and members asking them.

Prohibiting public employes from striking by providing for summary dismissal and two-year probation if refused.

Female Employment Relaxed

Relaxing the restrictions on employment of women and minors.

Limiting the time for 3-4 port-to-ports pay suits to two years.

Appropriating $547,000,000 for current operations during the biennium, $71,000,000 for additions and betterments for unemployment welfare and other projects and reappropriated about $460,000,000 previously allocated but unspent for such projects.

Increased salaries of all state elective officials and members of the legislature 30 per cent, similar increases for all other state officials and employes, judges and county officials.

Provided a state subsidy of $2.50 a day for tuberculosis patients maintained in public institutions and $1.25 per day for those maintained in private hospitals.

Changed Pension Laws

Placed police and firemen's pension systems on a solvent basis by doubling the members' contributions and establishing a guarantee fund of $11,500,000 in the state treasury for that purpose.

Provided $25,000,000 subsidy for local governments by allocating $12,000,000 from sales taxes and turning $13,000,000 in certain inheritance taxes over to local governments.

This would be supplemented by local levies of admissions taxes. An additional $2,250,000 in sales taxes was added for 1947 the amount admissions levies were expected to yield by Oct. 1 when cities could tax admissions.

Relieved employer contributions to the unemployment compensation fund approximately $30,000,000 a year and removed the war-time surtax contributions amounting to about $7,000,000 a year.

Permit cities to acquire land for private operation of off-street automobile parking lots, and allow zoning of unincorporated areas in counties.

Legislation Which Failed

Legislation that failed:

To outlaw the closed shop.

To establish a fair employment practices commission and to establish a commission to study the sub-sect.

A judges retirement system.

A measure to permit the sale of colored oleomargarine.

To build toll superhighways.

Urban redevelopment legislation that would have enabled municipalities to redevelop slum areas.

Authorizing acceptance of 10 per cent shelter rent of public housing projects in lieu of taxes.

County-wide local option.

Permitting Christian Science practitioners to charge for their services.

Congressional redistricting.

Redistricting the state for representation in the general assembly by constitutional amendment.

Placing quail on the game-bird list.

Designating Bingo as gambling.

Probe of un-American activities in schools and colleges.

SYMBOL OF FREEDOM. Where millions of foreign born have first set foot on American soil, young detainees at Ellis Island walk under a huge flag as they await legal entrance to New York. This picture was made as the immigrants on the island prepared to participate in the celebration of Flag day, their first American ceremony.

Crawford Courthouse Undergoes Repairs

Special to The Star

BUCYRUS, June 17 — When current repairs and remodeling is completed at the Crawford county courthouse, visitors will find extensive changes on all of the three floors and also in the basement rooms which are being prepared for the veterans' administration offices of Russell D Bash county service officer. Bash is now occupying temporary quarters on the second floor.

A general washing and cleaning of the interior is also nearing completion. County commissioners who ordered the work said that other basement offices will also be occupied upon completion but gave no indication of what offices would be moved there.

Rooms on the third floor occupied by the board of elections have been redecorated, and plastering repaired. In the auditor's office a partition on the counter has been removed and the counter otherwise improved. A partition has been built and a private office constructed in the county commissioners' office.

On the outside of the courthouse the two fountains and pools have been repaired and decorated and at the adjoining jail, spouting has been replaced and other minor decorating has been done.

YOUR HEALTH

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

Drug That Fights TB

For generations medics who have hoped for a drug which would attack and kill tuberculosis germs, thus paving the way for quick and certain cures of this dread disease. There are those who believe that it may be that this long-awaited substance has been found in streptomycin.

Streptomycin is one of the group of drugs known as antibiotics or germ killing substances of which penicillin is the most famous example. The great usefulness of these drugs lies in the fact that they act directly on disease germs. A number of those germs not affected by penicillin are vulnerable to streptomycin, particularly the tubercle bacilli.

According to Dr. H. Corwin Hinshaw and his co-workers of the Mayo Clinic, streptomycin stops the growth of tuberculosis germs. However, these physicians feel that streptomycin should be given a more thorough trial before it is substituted for the long accepted methods of controlling tuberculosis.

They themselves have used it to treat 75 patients with various types of tuberculosis, including the most fatal forms over a period of a year and a half.

In some patients, the condition was more rapidly and completely controlled than in others. Injections of streptomycin were given into a muscle, or under the skin, every three to six hours, day and night, from two to six months.

Some of the patients treated were suffering from tuberculous meningitis, a condition in which the tuberculous infection has involved the linings membranes of the brain and spinal cord. In such cases, the treatment was given by injection into the spinal column as well as into the muscle.

For tuberculosis of the lungs, moderate amounts of streptomycin, given for short periods of time, were found adequate to control the condition. In most cases the improvement was prompt and rapid. In other cases, the disease did not improve, but did not get any worse. It was found that the fever was lessened, coughing and the bringing up of sputum stopped, and lung inflammation became less within a few weeks time.

Tuberculosis affecting the large bronchial tubes in the lung, the windpipe and larynx or voice-box were benefited in two to four weeks time of having the patient breathe in a mist of the streptomycin several times a day, together with the use of injections into the muscle. The symptoms became less within a few days and the infected areas healed up. The condition did not recur after the treatment was stopped.

Unpleasant reactions involving soreness or a deafness occur in some instances. However, any serious results from the use of streptomycin are quite small. It is to be hoped that further study of this preparation in the treatment of tuberculosis will prove its great value.

Split Grows At Wilberforce

Rival Administrations, Summer Schools Started After President Ousted.

By The Associated Press

XENIA, O., June 17—A new defiance between the rival administrations at the institution appeared today as a second school with two rival administrations and summer schools.

Dr. Charles H. Wesley, who was ousted as president of the university last week by the African Methodist Episcopal church board of trustees, stood pat in his determination to continue as president of the college of arts and industrial arts—one of the university's three colleges.

Dr. Wesley, who has degrees from Fisk university, Yale and Harvard, also went ahead with plans for a summer school session despite court proceedings initiated by the church board. The church trustees obtained an order in common pleas court Saturday restraining Dr. Wesley from operating a summer school or inducing students to attend the college of arts.

The church trustees named Dr. Charles Leander Hill, a graduate from Columbia, S. C., to succeed Dr. Wesley.

Ray E. Hughes of Columbus, chairman of the state board of churches, declared Dr. Wesley had been fired "summarily" by the church board in violation of an agreement between the two bodies to abide by the recommendations of a joint executive committee. The church board, Hughes asserted, has jurisdiction only over the college of liberal arts and the restraining order it obtained did not apply to the college of education and industrial arts.

The court order, however was described as "all embracing" by John V. Gibney, attorney for the church board, and he declared that if he (Dr. Wesley) appears to be acting in defiance of the order he would be summoned before the court."

Hughes, who also is an attorney, declared "the purported injunction is meaningless" and added that Dr. Wesley would file a motion to dismiss the order and also probably would submit a cross petition asking that Dr. Hill be enjoined from assuming the office of president.

The state board scheduled a meeting here for next Thursday and Hughes said the board would go along with Dr. Wesley in his plans for a summer school and [illegible] the church board [illegible] the college of liberal arts [illegible] the church supported college of liberal arts.

In the suit filed in common pleas court the church board contends the college of liberal arts and industrial arts never before has operated a summer session and that Dr. Wesley [illegible] from operating a summer school [illegible] the church board [illegible] the property

VETERANS INSURANCE REPRESENTATIVE COMING

Columbus Official To Be In Marion Friday.

Leroy G Steinbeck, information special on GI insurance, will spend Friday at the Veterans Administration's contact office in the Marion building, 196 South Main street, according an announcement by Sam Manning, in charge of the local office.

Mr. Steinbeck, affiliated with the Columbia branch office, is head of the veterans insurance conservation service and an authority on insurance problems.

Since the administration has no agents or sales force it is interested in acquainting veterans with all changes that have been incorporated in the GI insurance in the past few months Figures show that of the approximate 5,000 World War II veterans in Marion county, about 3,500 have allowed some 32-million dollars of insurance to lapse since their discharges.

Mr. Steinbeck will emphasize the NSLI information and procedures which has been difficult to pass on to contact representatives by letter. The main concern is to encourage veterans to bring their designation of beneficiaries up to date, specify an optional mode of settlement, properly submit change of address and give proper instructions in preparation and signing of a form.

All veterans are invited to contact the representative to discuss any problem which needs to be explained.

CUBS SPANK MUNCIE, 12-2, TO LAND IN SECOND PLACE

Return To Marion Tonight To Battle with Richmond's Roses

Sabens Masters Packers as Burbrink Chased in Ninth for Sassing Umpires.

Special to The Star

MUNCIE, Ind., June 17—The Marion Cubs will return home tonight to play the Richmond Roses in their own den at Lincoln park after completing their most successful road trip in many years. They ended the jaunt here last night with a 12-2 triumph over the Muncie Packers. The win jumped the Bruins to second place.

While on the road the Cubs won five out of six, defeating Richmond in a pair of games and taking three of four from Muncie.

Righthander "Jitts" Lawrence, who first whipped the road jinx of 13 straight defeats at Richmond last Thursday, is expected to hurl for the Cubs.

Has Shutout Till 9th

Lefty Jim Sabens had a one-hit shutout until the ninth last night and even after he lost his control in that inning, the Cubs emerged with an easy triumph.

Sabens, who passed seven and fanned 12, walked in both Muncie runs in the ninth.

Marion's 12-hit attack was directed chiefly against righthander Walter Post who departed after allowing nine hits in 3 2/3 innings. Kenneth Lanning, a 17-year-old righthander who replaced him, did not allow a hit until the ninth when he gave up three to enable the Cubs to score two runs.

Nelson Top Slugger

Nelson, the left fielder, led the Marion batsmen with three singles and Nelson Burbrink and Rasmussen each got two.

Burbrink was chosed in the ninth for talking back to the plate umpire Pankratz and Muncie lost second baseman Howard Locke in the eighth for the same reason.

Ohio State League Extends Schedule

COLUMBUS, O., June 17—The Ohio State league, Class D baseball loop, voted in a mail ballot to extend its season from Sept. 7 to Sept. 21 in order to get a 52-game backlog of weather-caused postponements played off.

In announcing the vote today, League President Frank Colley said a new schedule would go into effect June 25, extending the season and limiting doubleheaders to Sundays and holidays. The usual post-season playoffs will follow the season's end, Colley said.

Burbrink Hogging Most of League Batting Honors

With the season almost one quarter completed, Nelson Burbrink, Marion receiver, is well ahead in the race for the Ohio State league batting crown.

Figures compiled by the Howe News Bureau show Burbrink has fashioned a .424 average, 17 points off his percentage of last week, in 34 games and 38 points ahead of his nearest rival, Lima's Jack Maisch with .386. The Marion Cubs rank second in team fielding and fifth in batting.

Third at .386 is Richmond's Bob Verrier with Rex Carr, Richmond receiver, fourth at .373.

Burbrink has also taken "grabs" on four specialized hitting leads with 53 hits, 82 total bases, five circuit blasts and 46 runs driven across the payoff hassock.

What few laurels remain are divided among four players: Gene Bobzean of Marion with 36 runs countered: Chuck Hopkins of Newark with six triples; Lima's Bob Huddleston with 13 doubles, and Bob Bartholomew of Zanesville with 13 stolen bases. Sanford Lambert, Zanesville southpaw who set down 14 Newark batters on strikes June 10 is the loop's leading hurler with six wins and one loss. But on June 6 Bill Woolard of Newark blanked Muncie in an abbreviated 6-inning contest with no hits.

Despite Weather, Majors Head Toward Gate Record

By The Associated Press

Those who have been predicting that major league baseball attendance never again would approach the altitudinous figures reached last season may be forced to eat their words.

Weather has forced a near record number of postponements but big league attendance is running almost even with last year's record figures.

With the prospect of a neck and neck race right down to the wire in both leagues, the 1946 total of 18,612,704 paying fans may be bettered.

6,798,795 Paid

Including games played last night, the two leagues have drawn a total of 6,798,795 fans, only 101,650 cash customers behind the corresponding period a year ago on games through June 16.

National league clubs showing increases are New York, Boston, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and St. Louis.

In the American league, Chicago, Cleveland and Detroit show increases.

A night game Yankee stadium crowd of 52,633 fans saw their favorite New York Yankees trail for seven innings, then come through with two runs in the eighth and one in the ninth to beat the Chicago White Sox 4-3.

DiMaggio Leads Off

In the ninth, Joe DiMaggio led off with a double, was sacrificed to third and scored the winning run on a perfectly executed squeeze bunt by Phil Rizzuto.

With 20,097 looking on in Chicago, the Brooklyn Dodgers took advantage of two errors by first baseman Ed Waitkus to score two unearned runs to eke out a 2-1 decision over the Cubs.

In the only other game played in the majors, the rejuvenated St. Louis Cardinals nosed out the Philadelphia Phillies, 4-3, in St. Louis, scoring the winning run in the tenth.

An error by right fielder Johnny Wyrostek on Terry Moore's single enabled Red Schoendienst, who had singled, to score all the way from first.

PHILS LAND HIGH SCHOOL PITCHING ACE SIMMONS

Nine Other Clubs Bid for Boy With Impressive Record.

By The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA, June 17—The Philadelphia Phillies had landed Curt Simmons today after what was possibly the most vigorous major league bidding campaign since the war.

This Simmons fellow is a lean 18-year-old southpaw who stands six foot one and who pitched until June 6 for Whitehall, Pa., high school where he ran up one of the most impressive pitching and batting records in schoolboy annals.

Neither General Manager Herb Pennock nor President Bob Carpenter, who signed Simmons yesterday and shipped him to the Phils' Wilmington farm in the class B Interstate league, would disclose how much Simmons received for signing.

But Carpenter said it was "a considerable sum" and Pennock amended "it was one of the best contracts I ever saw.

Said Simmons: "It's wonderful."

The Phils' bidding victory was scored over nine other major league clubs, the American league Detroit, Cleveland, New York, Boston and Philadelphia teams, and the National league St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Brooklyn and New York entries.

PLAYS THAT COUNT

By FRANK ECKS
Associated Press Sports Editor

Mel Ott, managing the New York Giants for the sixth season, has seen so many important plays since he came up with the team in 1925 that he finds it difficult to pick out the most outstanding.

"But," says Mel, "the oddest play I ever saw came in the 1933 World Series in the Polo Grounds when we were playing Washington.

"Blondy Ryan was at shortstop for us and there was a man on first base. Ryan sort of slapped at a batted ball as if he had no chance to make a play but the ball landed into Hughie Critz's glove at second base for the start of a queer double play."

The Giants beat the Senators in the Series, four games to one.

Bob Elliott Leading Poll For All-Star 3rd Sacker

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, June 17—Bob Elliott of Boston today went back into the leadership in the poll for third baseman on the National league All-Star team. George "Whitey" Kurowski, of St. Louis, had passed Elliott Sunday, but was unable to maintain his slim margin.

Elliott had 39,418 votes in the latest tabulation, to 36,672 for Kurowski.

LEGION REPORTS ALL TICKETS FROM LIMA TILT NOT TURNED IN

1,560 Returned; First Game Set at Delaware Week from Saturday.

All tickets and funds from the American Legion benefit game last week had not come in yesterday making it impossible for the baseball committee to issue a full report.

Money for 1,560 tickets had been turned in and treasurer of the committee, Craig Rogers, estimated that about $100 was still out. The Legion had hoped to raise $4,000 through the benefit game.

Mr. Rogers has requested that all persons still having money or tickets out, turn it in immediately to him at Rogers Permanent Wave Shop at 255 South Main street or to Jewell Ralston at Ralston Brother's store at 796 Bellefontaine avenue.

In the meantime the junior squad is still going through nightly workouts in preparation for their next game. It will be at Delaware a week from Saturday at 2:30 p. m. Practice games with local teams may be held before then.

Last night the movie, "Play Ball Son," was shown to the team. It is an instructive film about the correct way to play baseball.

Action on the tentative intracity junior baseball league is expected to be taken this week. The Legion baseball committee may work with the city park commission in setting up a program.

STOCK MARKET HAS THAT TIRED FEELING

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, June 17—The market presented a tired face today and price changes either way were negligible.

The retreat at the opening was checked by slow improvements by some steels and others which succeeded in reducing losses or translating them into gains. This took place, however, in the slowest trading in any full week. Near the fourth hour gains and minus signs were about even stevered.

Among the performers included Chrysler, General Motors, U. S. Steel Sheet, International Harvester, North American, Douglas, Du Pont, Cheasapeake & Ohio and United Aircraft. Others were such leaders as American Telephone (at a new high), U. S. Rubber, Douglas Aircraft, Johns-Manville, Owens-Illinois Glass, Great Northern preferred, Socony Vacuum, Standard Oil (N.J.) and General Electric.

Poland Boy Is Elected Head Of Boys' State at Delaware

By The Associated Press

DELAWARE, O., June 17—Clifton Reichard, 17, of Poland, O., today was chief executive of Ohio's 11th Buckeye Boys' state.

The 822 boys attending the 10-day school in practial government on the Ohio Wesleyan university campus elected him governor yesterday after lively campaigning between the Federalist and Nationalist parties.

Reichard, who headed the Federalist ticket, defeated Jay W. Beatty, 17, of Middletown, the Nationalist nominee.

Other winners were: James J. Murphy, 16, of Hamilton, Nationalist, elected lieutenant governor over Vernon L. Lafferty, 19, of Coshocton, Federalist; Isadore B. Codispoti, of Brewster, Federalist, secretary of state over Louis A. Palumbo, 17, of Norwood, Nationalist;

James R. (Buck) Wilson, 17, of Hamilton, Federalist, treasurer, over Edwin Paul Rinehart, 16, of Marietta, Nationalist; William Clapp, 16, of Upper Arlington, Nationalist, auditor, over Perry Brown, 16, Germantown Federalist; and Robert L. Steele, 16, of Euclid, Federalist, attorney general, over Warren N. Letson, 17, of Warren.

Judge Charles B. Zimmerman of the Ohio supreme court installed the new officials in ceremonies last night.

Today the state, county and city governments of the mythical "49th state" began to function. Lawyers took their bar examinations and meetings of the state legislature were held in Sanborn hall. City and county governments were functioning in Willis High school and court session was held in Monnett hall at 1:30 p. m.

At last night's inauguration ceremonies, Governor Reichard was driven to Gray chapel in a Highway department phaeton where all members of the state were assembled, escorted by members of the state highway patrol. A band of approximately 100 pieces, directed by Dean W. L. DeWeese, played for the first time at this ceremony. Don Shoeppe, of Warren, state commander of the American Legion was speaker for the evening.

According to patrolmen the accident happened when Broderick, driving south, attempted to pass the truck just as Cusick started to make a right turn into a driveway. Broderick attempted to pass the turning truck, patrolmen said, and collided with the rear of the truck when he was forced back by an approaching northbound truck. Both vehicles were damaged considerably.

LOVE'S PERILOUS PATH

By ADELE GARRISON

I CALLED to Katharine from the doorway, for in the tense state of Mary's nerves I did not wish her to think that my kinswoman and I were going to discuss he

"Will you please come in now and look at your patient?" I asked casually

But Katharine was not casual when she came into the bedroom and looked at Mary's face

"What's this?" she asked "You've been going it too hard You're all keyed up, my girl!"

'I've something to be keyed up over,' Mary returned "I'm getting my teeth into my lines. Mayn't I work a little longer?'

Katharine gave an incredulous little laugh—purposely, I knew

"With that flushed face and those eyes?" she said "Not a chance! First, I'm going to take your temperature If you have any, which I doubt, you're going back to bed If you haven't, I'm going to give you a cool sponge, an alcohol rub, an iced fruit drink with some carbonated water, and have you lie down for a little while Then, if you calm down and eat a good luncheon, we'll see about another session with your aunt this afternoon.

But you need not stay in bed except for a few minutes if you have no temperature,' Katharine went on "You may sit up and read or play solitaire or work a puzzle jig saw or cross word, or indulge in light and aid conversation with your aunt or me"

Perhaps Her Uncle

"Or perhaps your uncle when he wakens" I interpolated

"Exactly," Katharine said "Now, Madge, you've had quite a time Suppose you go into the sitting room and rest for awhile You'll be at hand if I need you but you can relax Put that vast mind on thinking up something special for luncheon Mary and I aren't giving any orders We want you to surprise us, ain't it so, Mary?"

I knew she was chattering to give Mary time to reconcile herself to her disappointment And to my relief Mary played up

"I can't think of anything more scrumptious than to be surprised for luncheon,' she said "But I don't think Auntie Madge can put all her time on thinking up menus She said she had some important letters to write"

I knew that she was urging me not to forget the letter I had promised to write to her Aunt Harriet putting the fateful question about the mental condition of Harriet's sister Elizabeth, Mary's mother long dead

'I'll get those in and get them mailed too' I told her and caught a flash from Katharine's keen eyes which told me that while she did not know the nature of my letter-writing, she was not missing the fact that Mary was concerned about it

"With all that on your mind you'd better vamoose, then' she said, and, wrinkling my nose at her, I went into the sitting room and sat down at my desk, with notepaper and pens before me

For a long time, I could find no words in which to couch my letter to Harriet Braithwaite Finally however, I took my pen in hand' —the old phrase seemed suited to my mood—and rapidly sketched Mary's dilemma. I did not need to tell of her illness, her aunt already knew of that But I did dwell at length upon the terror which was Mary's about her mental inheritance

When I had finished, revised, and copied it, I addressed and stamped an envelope with a special delivery and an air mail stamp Then I had everything aside to show to Dicky when he should waken Mary was his niece her dead mother and Harriet Braithwaite were his sisters. I did not feel that I ought to send that letter without his seeing it

Mary's Terrible Fear

I also was excited at the prospect of consulting with my husband about the terrible fear which was Mary's By tacit agreement, we had not identified that fear alone, although I knew that he was as sure as I, that she was afraid she had lost her memory But we did not feel justified in speaking even to each other about it until Mary should tell one of us about it herself

Now Mary had told me of it I felt no qualms about having provided her — and I had discovered that loss of memory was the smallest part of her problem I felt that I could not wait to consult my husband about the sinister dread that was eating her heart out

I looked at my wrist watch I could not expect Dicky to waken for another hour at least I slipped the letter into a desk drawer—and stiffened as the knocker sounded

Who could be calling?

I had my answer when I opened the door, to find Philip Verityen standing in the hall
